SMITH, William Brownlee

Death at Ladybrand: 1st February 1902, 6th. Bat. 18th. Company Lancashire Yeomanry, 1245 Wm. B. Smith from wounds accidentally received on 21st January 1902. (Evening Post 27th. January 1902).

He had requested on completion of his service to the 18th Coy. Imperial Yeomanry to be transferred to the N.Z.6th Contingent which was returning to New Zealand at the same time thus saving him the additional journey back to New Zealand after being discharged in England.

ENTERIC or TYPHOID FEVER

Before World War I, enteric fever, or typhoid fever, was the scourge of armies, and in the Anglo-Boer War killed more soldiers than enemy action. It is caused by a bacteria entering the body via contaminated food or water. Early symptoms include high fever, headaches and lassitude. Follicles along the intestinal walls later become inflamed, often leading to perforation and haemorrhaging. Other complications include gall bladder, pneumonia or heart failure.

At the time of the Boer War, there were no antibiotic remedies for the disease.
